

what do you carry that bow and arrow for I wonder if you can hit your mark He immi-
-diately clapped his hand on his quiver and laying hold of an arrow exclaimed,

The champion when takes his stand With bow and quiver in his hand

The might lions canderide

Or elephants inflamed with pride

The lady answered in the same strain & c

Such is the youth for me has charms

The coward neer shall reach mine arms

Her plied.

Love frenzied face impells the blow Instant his law

At onstant on of the elephants approached the Young warrior drew the arrow home even to his ear and struck it up to the feather and notch in his eye seizing another arrow he instantly struck it so forcibly through the other eye that with a dreadful yell it fell on the ground and expired The second elephant advanced still more furiously and was slain as quickly as the first He then drew his scymiter and cut off both their trunks The Emperors daughter was greatly delighted with this